

SCHOOL OF LABOR & EMPLOYMENT RELATIONS

UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS AT URBANA-CHAMPAIGN

The School of Labor and Employment Relations has been established as a leader in training HR/IR professionals for over 70 years. We draw on the world-class resources of the University of Illinois, with a reputation of international stature, routinely ranked among the best in the nation for distinguished faculty, outstanding students, respected academic programs and rich resources.

Our multi-disciplinary three-semester master's degree program provides a solid foundation for graduates to meet the challenges of an evolving workplace. The program offers traditional coursework in human resource management and organizational behavior; unions, management, and labor relations policy; labor markets and employment; and international human resources. If your organization is seeking involvement in any learning opportunities, contact us.

We are very proud of our successful placement of interns and graduates in their chosen field. In 2016-17, 94% of domestic students found full-time employment by June 2017. Ninety-nine percent of domestic intern candidates were placed.

“Why is Graduate Recruitment so important to Amgen? Building our next generation of HR leaders is integral to the sustainability and success of our organization. We benefit from LER students that add to the energy within our organization, grow diversity of thought and perspective, and drive further innovation.”

-Bernard Bedon, Ph.D., Vice President, Talent, Amgen Inc.
